RICHOVAL. --PAIRSECHNA. Our carriage being ready, we quitted these most amiable people at four in the evening, and proceeded twenty-five wersts (two hours and a half), by a road in itself good, though over uneven ground, to the post of Belotserkowka. The sun shining in our faces was very hot, even at six in the evening. Our next stage was to Beigadirowska, twenty wersts. At setting out we crossed several bridges and a large river, and ascended a hill beyond it, within the first two miles. The rest of the road was good, and continued so through the town of Corol, twenty-five wersts, which we passed in the night. One of our front wheels ran off the box of the axle on our approach to Loobna (thirty-three wersts), and we halted to have it repaired. On this emergency, and on many others, while the gentlemen were doing all in their power to assist us, the people of the lower class showed a disposition to impose upon us, running away with...
