Chinas rise as a major international actor is likely to stand out as a defining feature of the strategic landscape of the early 21st century. Sustained economic development has raised the standard of living for Chinas citizens and elevated Chinas international profile. This development, coupled with an expanding science and technology base, has also facilitated a comprehensive and ongoing military modernization program. The United States welcomes a strong, prosperous, and successful China that reinforces international rules and norms and enhances security and peace both regionally and globally. China is steadily assuming new roles and responsibilities in the international community. In 2004, Chinese President Hu Jintao articulated new guidance for the Peoples Liberation Army (PLA), including missions extending beyond Chinas immediate territorial interests. This catalyzed Chinas growing involvement in international peacekeeping efforts, counter-piracy operations, humanitarian assistance and disaster relief, and the evacuation of Chinese citizens from overseas trouble spots. Chinas 2010 Defense White Paper asserts that Chinas future and destiny have never been more closely connected with those of the international community. Nonetheless, Chinas modernized military could be put to use in ways that increase Chinas ability to gain diplomatic advantage or resolve disputes in its favor. Although the PLA is contending with a growing array of missions, Taiwan remains its main strategic direction. China continued modernizing its military in 2010, with a focus on Taiwan contingencies, even as cross-Strait relations improved. The PLA seeks the capability to deter Taiwan independence and influence Taiwan to settle the dispute on Beijings terms. In pursuit of this objective, Beijing is developing capabilities intended to deter, delay, or deny possible U. S. support for the island in the event of conflict. The...
